■ The Gazette feels the need to offer the true stats for a few situations. When looking at who is the best franchise since 2020, it actually is a tie between Michael and Berdos. Both have

42 wins, both have exactly 1 championship, and they are 5-5 against each other.

DREW ALLEN

■ Some stats since Michael said my team “sucks and blows.” before Week 10. Chameleons: 3-1 record, 660.78 PF, 23-13 all play record, 4 starters on bye (Chase, London, Conner, Tracy). Neigh Sayers: 2-2 record, 580.14 PF, 18-18 all play record, 3 players on bye (Jacobs, Kamara, Jakobi). I didn't want to put this in here, but it was anonymously sent to me, so I had to!

■ Quiz: Give me the top 5 fantasy point scorers over the last 4 years from the 2021 draft class (the Chase draft)

■ My boss came into my office yesterday with an article idea, and when the namesake of your paper tells you to do something, you do it. As he was staring down a huge deficit going into Monday Night Football, he wanted to find some hope. So he asked me to find all the instances that one player played the ultimate hero, and brought a team a victory on MNF by themselves. The standards were as such:

- The player had to play on MNF that week
- The deficit had to be >20 points
- The player had to score > 20 points (QB limit was 30)
- They had to give their team the win

The results will be in order of coolness, as decided

Speaking of wild MNF performances by me. Any complaints, send me an email at drewdaddy@fantasylover.com.

-----Tier 3: Pretty cool, but kind of expected----- 2020 Week 4, Aaron Rodgers (37.58 points), Holden beats Brian - A QB scoring 35ish points isn't expected, but not out of the realm of possibility. This is as low as it is because the deficit was only 24 points, and Holden also had Aaron Jones scoring 19 points that game to end up winning comfortably.

2021 Week 7, Alvin Kamara (28.90 points), Drew beats Jennette - Again, this may not be fair, but this is low because old Kamara is honestly someone you'd pick to win the week. He also gets knocked for needing 2 other players to grab the win. Drew was down 36 going into MNF, but Kamara was the main factor; the other two both scored less than 10 combined.

-----Tier 2: Alright, that was awesome -----
2022 Week 5, Kelce and Davante (30 and 25.9 points), Berdos beats Holden - Down a staggering 58.3 points, he almost got all of it back with these two. Derek Carr had a measly 20 points to make the final result look out of reach, but scoring 56 points with 2 players in the same game is nuts.

2023 Week 12, Danielle Hunter (19.50 points), Kyle beats Jennette - The only reason this isn't T1 is because it's just below the 20 marker. But in all reality, expecting TEN points from your DE is nuts. 20? That's wild. Kyle was down 20 points coming into the game, and got over the line via another defensive player.

A true truck

2024 Week 4, Kenneth Walker (32.60 points), Donny beats Andrew - I remember this one clearly. I had a big lead, and kind of thought I was safe. But clearly I wasn't. This one specifically may win Donny the division. Just misses Tier 1 due to Jameson Williams also grabbing 15+ points.

-----Tier 1: What the fuck happened-----
2021 Week 5, Lamar Jackson (49.88 points),

Andrew beats Drew - Drew was up 48 points. That was 1 point short. Lamar had 6 points at half. I assume the percentage chance was 1% at that point. He ended up throwing 4 touchdowns in the 2nd half, and was a lost fumble away from eclipsing 50 points.

2020 Week 3, Patrick Mahomes (48.00 points), Kyle beats Holden- Down 49 points, one week before Holden had his own legendary MNF game, Kyle showed him how it was done. Mahomes brought them close, and CEH and Chris Jones got it done.
