Points!

Here at the Gazette, we love points.

DREW ALLEN

Picked up the pieces while I petition the NFL to get rid of bye weeks because they hurt my fantasy team...

■ As is the case most days, I was bored and was messing around with a dynasty team evaluation template I found online. One of the cooler pages in it was tracking who your starters were each year; it kept track of starters in Week 1 and the first week of playoffs (for us, weeks 14 and 15). As I like to do, I decided to frame that idea across our league, and see what trends or cool facts we could find with this data. All this data is available in the statbook, in the page called “One Team Men” all the way at the end. Let’s dive in.

■ To make sure you truly understand, I’ll give you an example. Lamar Jackson started Week 1

2019 for me. He also started Week 14 (the first week of playoffs, skipping bye weeks which skews data). That is 2 “points” to him. This stat is mainly just to track longevity, durability (need to be starting), and “loyalty” to a team.

■ Quiz: Only two players have started every first/last game for the same franchise, including this year. Name them.

■ For Drew the leaders are expected. Dalvin Cook and Alvin Kamara lead the way with 8 and 7 points. He traded away Kamara midway through the 2022 season which put him in the 2nd spot. Rounding out the top 3 is one of the few defensive players. Micah Parsons was a draft staple of his, and has been his DE since 2021.

■ I think most of mine are relatively straightforward as well. Lamar and Deebo Samuel are tied at the top, and are ahead by a bit of a margin over third. Third place is none other than trade drama man St. Nick Chubb. He is tied with Miles Sanders, but their spot in the bronze is most likely gone in a few weeks though, as Ja’Marr Chase will pass him with a start in Week 15.

■ Tyreek Hill and Daniel Carlson have been staples of Jennette’s team for a long time, and sit tied for 1st for now. But a sneaky fun player is Antoine Winfield who sits one back. Carlson should stay 1st with a start in Week 15.

■ The man in 1st place for Jack is someone who started all the way back in 2019, and I genuinely didn’t know he’s been in the league that long. That would be David Montgomery, the iron man himself. Chris Godwin won’t keep a hold on 2nd place with his season ending injury, as Justin Jefferson should pass him as well.

■ The top 2 for Donny are very classic. Josh Allen and TJ Watt have been staples of his team since 2020, and that won’t be changing anytime soon. His old team nomiker Michael Pittman sits in third for now.

■ I talk about certain players being “classic” picks for a franchise, but no franchise loves their players like Berdos. Davante Adams and CMC lead the way for him, but for some reason, this guy was the biggest Jordan Poyer fan of all time. He was an everyday starter up until midway through 2023.

■ Usually quarterbacks are the most stable assets, and for Kyle, it’s no different. Mahomes is in 1st for him, folowed closely by Keenan Allen. Kyle will be happy to know the IDP GOAT Foyesade sits alone in third, and his injury riddled season this year may not affect him in Week 15.

■ Brian’s is a funny one. I’m not sure he’d even be able to guess first place for him. That would be

Lions love points, Jack loves points, what’s not to like here?

Ezekiel Elliott, who started all the way up to 2022 for him. Herbert is in 2nd (soon 1st), and then the only closest active player on his roster sits down at 4 with Garrett Wilson.

■ Michael (and Harrison) have Justin Sucker in first, and a return to the hometown for Russell Wilson, who is in third! Maybe he starts Week 15?? The forever free agent Saquon is 2nd as well.

■ People may forget that Holden was a Packers fan for a long time. Aaron Rodgers and Aaron Jones were staples of his team. It will be the end of the road soon for his 2nd place in Austin Ekeler though.
