Horse Hunting

Will the real Norfolk Mikey please stand up?

Picked up the pieces after seeing a doctor 4 hours after Thursday night...

■ Had a request from someone who has a very good all play record to run this simulation, so here we go. The question came my way Monday night, and it was pretty simple.

Some leagues, to make things a bit more fair in the case of someone having a weekly all play record of 8-1 but playing the 9-0 person, will add in a “median” win, where if you finish in the top half of weekly scoring, you get an extra win. If you finish in the bottom half, you get an extra loss. So you can end the week 2-0, 1-1, or 0-2. I’m not sure how much this changes in the overall standings, as in general this all evens out over time, but I always need something to write about, so here we go.

DREW ALLEN

Jack: 15-5
Warra suprise. I bet Jack feels hard done. Cue the violin stickers.

Jennette: 11-9
If Jennette kept Derrick Henry, theres a chance he would be leading the league in wins. If he kept Stefon Diggs instead, he’d probably be in the hole.

Andrew: 11-9
Three 9-0 all play weeks push him up to 5-5 in the median W/L ratio.

Kyle: 11-9
Don’t look now, but Kyle is now 1 game out of the division lead with a head to head game against Michael still on the schedule, after starting out bottom 3 in the league.

Joseph Brr had a monster game for Jack, but it was overshadowed by a few other players.

Michael: 11-9
Don’t look now, but Michael is now 1 game up in the division lead with a head to head game against Kyle still on the schedule, after starting out midtable in the league.

Berdos: 10-10
CMC is back. Any slip ups from the owners above him and a push to the top is within reach. He plays Michael this week as well.

Donny: 9-11
Some people may be annoyed that Donny is top of the division after scoring 100 points last week. Not me, but people.

Brian: 9-11
Median scoring doesn’t help Brian, as he sits 2nd last in his division in both worlds.

Drew: 7-13
Drew famously said “Blame me, not my team” in regards to his start/sit decisions. When can we blame his team for sucking?

Holden: 6-14
Bottom of the league in regular scoring is bottom of the league in this scoring system. More at 11. Jalen Hurts is fun though, and gives Holden a fighting chance every week.

■ Quiz: There are 2 non QBs that have 3 or more Player of the Week awards, which is won by being the top scoring player across the entire league for that week. Name them. Answer at the end.

Is Bijan finally living up to his hype?

- We have another matchup member to the 10 win club. With Berdos’ win over Holden, he moves to 10-3 all time against him.
- For all original 9 members (Michael started late so we won’t count it against him), only 3 members haven’t hit 10 wins in one matchup: Jennette, Holden, and Jack.
- Ka’imi Fairbairn takes the lead in the battle for All Time PK1. In a horrible twist, Austin

Seibert missed his 2nd game, which means he cannot miss a game the rest of the year to be counted. This one will come down to the wire!
