Way To Early

Week 1 done, but to(o) many faceplants to take much from it

Picked up the pieces as I set up shop in the Gazette offices for the near future...

■ The last two years, Drew started out with at least 3 wins to stat the year, mostly after people say his team sucks. That won't happen this year, other than the people saying his team sucks.

- Donny had a whopping 5 players listed on the team of the week. That is the 4th ever time that we have had that happen. He only started 3 of them though. Back in Week 2 2023, Drew started 4/5 with Brian Robinson, Mike Evans, Jake Moody, and Micah Parsons. He scored 179 that day.

DREW ALLEN

- Don't fret! 43% of all teams that started 0-1 made the playoffs. On the other hand, only 3% of teams that have started 1-0 ended up in the toilet bowl. I'd say the odds that the toilet bowl matchup contains two of Jack, Jennette, Drew, Holden, and Berdos is pretty high.

- Over the past 2 years, we've seen NFL teams start the season slow, and it certainly translates to us. Last year, Week 1 was the lowest average scoring week, and in 2023, it was the 2nd lowest week. This year the average score was 132 points. For reference, last year's season long average was 146 points. Expect an uptick in points next week.

- Quiz: Name the only owner in history who won their first game yet ended up in the TB.

- Starting a new weekly segment called #PathToThePotty. We will go over what exactly is needed for two interesting league members to stay out of the toilet bowl. That of course would be our reigning two time hole digger Hole-den, and "the future is now" John Berdos. 5 wins is considered the absolute minimum to stay out. So where are our most likely 5 wins? Let's dive in.

No one enjoyed Sunday Night Football as much as Donny did.

Right off the bat we have a huge game between the two of them this upcoming week. The winner of this will have a serious leg up; the loser will already be starting 2 games behind the 8 ball. Advantage Berdos here, as the general idea of his team is that as the year goes on, his aging assets get injured and he starts to really suck. The rematch in Week 8 is also interesting, as Holden will be missing Jeanty, Monty, and MHJ due to bye weeks.

Other than those two matchups, I find it hard to find wins for Berdos. Holden should be able to squeeze out some wins in other weeks, but it's too early to tell every team's real strengths. But we have a paper to write today, so: Berdos's best target as of now may be week 10 against Jack (missing Burrow and Rashee), and Holden can aim for a 3rd win week 6 against Drew.

- First 4 WRs drafted in 2023 and their respective finish this week:

Quentin Johnston: WR2
Jaxon Smith-Njigba: WR14
Jordan Addison: DNS
Zay Flowers: WR1

Good week for that draft class! 1.01 was also the RB2 on the week.

- Chuba Hubbard just continues to be a dawg for Berdos. Quietly having another good start to the year, and Berdos desperately needs that if he wants help this year.

- 7 teams have an average age in the range of 24-25 years old for their roster. Donny's team sits at 26.6, Michael's team is 27.4, and Berdos's team is as old as us, with an age of 28.8.

Start your position players against the Patriots defense this year.

- A much used tool in the dynasty space has the following records projected for us after Week 1.

Holden: 5-9

Berdos: 4-10

Drew: 3-11 (eye emoji)

They also give Drew a 4% chance to make the playoffs. Hopefully his first round pick went to good use.

- Favorites went 5-0 this week. Everyone said Holden was getting disrespected with his boosted odds, yet you were all smart enough to not bet on him.
