Picked up the pieces while prepping the Thanksgiving dinner...

■ With Brian's win, he will now finish with at least 4 wins. This is not going down the same old path I always go with him this year, but rather, this marks another year where we will not have anyone finish 3-11. The only records we have not finished in other than that are 1-13, 10-4, 13-1, and of course 14-0.

■ As of now, this is going to be the lowest scoring average year we have ever had, just below 2019.

■ With Michael winning a division title, that leaves only two owners without one; Jennette and Kyle.

■ Favorites are only winning at a 58% clip this

■ Brian officially stopped his longest ever loss streak of 6 games. He hadn't had a streak over 4 losses in his entire history.

■ Quiz: Kyle has started Patrick Mahomes every first week and last week, other than once, in week 14 2021. Name that QB.

■ Let's take a look at our season long bets that were placed, as a few of them have already been decided.

- Starting off, we had a big bet on Brian to make the playoffs. Thanks to our resident Scott Kramer, we know those odds are low right now. Chalk up a win to the bookie.

- A fan favorite coming into this year was Berdos digging the hole. With his win over Holden, that is officially out of the range of outcomes. It was a lot closer than I may have thought, but still, not a real sweat.

Bo Nix unfortunately did NOT throw touchdowns to anyone other than Courtland Sutton

- We had the dueling bets from Kyle and Jack as well. As a reminder, Jack put his bets in, and Kyle decided to do the "Anti Jack" and bet the opposite. Now, if you weren't aware, this is mostly a default win for the bookie. If there is an even split of bets on -110 odds, the bookie takes the edges as profit, no matter what. Jack will finish the O/U bets at 2-1, as he correctly predicted both Jennette to be over, and Kyle to be under.

- Jack also bet on himself to win the whole thing, and in defiance of that, Kyle bet him to be in the hole. Maybe try a different strategy next time Kyle.

- I forget if this was a personal text, so I'll keep their name private for now, but we may have some wins from this bettor. Holden in the toilet bowl has some serious steam at +100, and he bet on Donny to make the playoffs at +350. A less likely bet is for Josh Allen to lead the QBs in scoring, as he sits 90 points back from 1st place. And finally, as the bookie always wins, we have lost bets on Jennette digging the hole, Andrew in the toilet bowl, and Berdos to win the division.

■ Though we just went over a littany of losses, here is my claim to get you to keep betting with me. These are real odds that have a chance to hit, and they were juicy preseason odds.

- Kyle to be in the toilet bowl at +1000
- If that does come true, Kyle to dig the hole was +1600

- We also offered odds on the point leaders at each position, and there really havent been any surprises. If you built a parlay of Lamar, Saquon, Ja'Marr, Kittle, and Jayden Daniels (highest scoring rookie), 5 dollars would have won you a nice 4.3k.

Trey McBride had another good week

■ Other than Berdos not drafting anyone at all, I'm not sure we have had people draft rookie players, and have them finish the year with a total combined points of less than 5. We have a chance to do that this year. Jennette drafted Roman Wilson (to lots of laughs from Brian), and Michael Penix. Roman Wilson has legitimately seen 1 (one) snap all year, in week 6, and Penix has only been in for mopup duty in ATL.
