No Holes Barred

On hole digging weekend, Holden takes a huge step

Picked up the pieces of James Conner's ankle and Tyrone Tracy's shoulder...

■ Jack only has 30 points combined for his linebackers in his lineups after 3 weeks. There are currently 8 linebackers who have more than 30 points themselves. Two of them are current free agents. One of them, Jack picked up this week, and he scored 3 points for him.

DREW ALLEN

- If Drew had not traded 2 1sts for Rome and Herbert, he would be 1-2, with his own first round pick still.
- Quiz: There have been six teams in league history to start 0-3. Two of them went on to not only escape the toilet bowl, but they made they playoffs. Name those two teams.
- There seems to currently be a tier gap forming in the league. We have 6 teams all with a random assortment of 2 or 3 wins, and then we have 4 teams with 1 or 0 wins. That leads us nicely into...

■ #PathToThePotty time! As said last week, we have a lot to discuss after this week. Somehow, after 3 weeks, Berdos and Holden currently BOTH are NOT in the toilet bowl. A huge result for Holden saw him snap his losing streak and give him a little breathing room from the bottom. This was a big game for him. Going 4-7 the rest of the way is a lot easier than going 5-6.

Berdos didn't put up much of a fight this week, but against the highest scoring team, that's a loss that you can write off.

Now, now, now. I mentioned in the previous writeup, that we would potentially have some new entrants if results went a certain way. And we now have those entrants! Two teams currently sit with no wins: Drew and Jennette. One of the two sent two first picks this year for players. Now, I won't say that was a bad trade. As of right now, those players seemingly have been worth it! But clearly that hasn't been enough, and we already are having complaints and blame thrown around about lineup decisions. At this time of the year, that's not a good sign. Say it with me now... 3, 2, 1, Cancun!

Jonathan Taylor had a banner day for Jack

Jennette is in a different spot. On paper, he has some good players. Bucky, Breece, Egbuka, Warren, all would likely start on most teams around the league. Yet he hasn't been able to put it together. Out of the 4 I mentioned here, he is the one I am least worried about as of right now. But, he still has to find 5 wins on the schedule. A big game vs Drew looms in Week 7. Holden also plays Drew in Week 6. If things don't turn around for our Norwood owner, he could be in a world of trouble.

■ I won't talk about it every week, but after all the chatter and discussion about Travis Hunter, it seems very fitting that 13 other drafted rookies have all scored more points than he has. DB29 after 3 weeks, no touchdowns scored.

■ We had a discussion about hole digging times, and that led some friendly competition about hole digging times. Here are my top 3, in any order, that I want to see dig the hole. Not because of them in particular, but I'll give my reasoning after.

Berdos: I mean this guy is so competitive, that I think he would get so angry about it that he'd try and get it done as fast as possible. He just did an ironman for gods sake, so he clearly is fit enough to just blitz through it. He also would be angry that he would be missing some spikeball games, which would motivate him more to finish.

Courtland Sutton was back to being the WR1 in Denver. So much for Troy Franklin Kyle and Michael (tie): Both of these guys think its not a punishment. They both like digging holes. That doesn't necessarily mean that translates to fast digging times, but I'd expect a respectable showing, with no breaks, considering how fun it is.

Drew: This one may take the longest, not because of an athleticism question, I just feel like he'd take a lot of breaks and would just talk the entire time. I want to see him dig purely to see if he breaks the 2 hour mark.

■ Quiz answer: Drew in 2021; Michael in 2023
