The Last Rung

Holden only a few steps away from climbing out

Picked up the pieces while wondering if there are any more tight ends I can pick up to put on my roster...

■ It has to be said. I understand that injuries play a factor in it, but we mentioned it last year when it reached 5 for Michael. But as of writing this, Jennette has 6 QBs on his roster in a 1QB league. Only 2 of them have over 100 points on the year.

DREW ALLEN

■ Time for a historical check in. Unfortunately for Jennette, every single 1-7 team in our league history has made the toilet bowl. Drew is a bit luckier with 50% of 2-6 teams falling in. A more damning one stat though makes me ready to call it. Only 6% of teams that were 4-4 have ever made the toilet bowl, which puts me in a comfortable spot to say we our down to our four finalists for #PathToThePotty, and I'm not sure we will be adding anyone at a later date. But, we'll get to that later.

■ The current draft order in terms of who is drafting come 2026 is: Jennette, Kyle, Kyle, Jennette. There's a world where Kyle is setting the lineups of both 3rd place game participants, and he said he'd be doing kicker v kicker.

■ Quiz: Name the only 4-4 team to end up in the toilet bowl.

■ Low scoring week. Rashee Rice was your WR2 with only 21 points. The WR1? Troy Franklin.

■ Path Math time. As stated before, if you currently have less than 4 wins, you may be entitled to financial compensation from the Berdos Gazette, as you will most likely continue to be in this section for the rest of year, bar some winning. More seriously, this is likely how it's going to go. We are down to our 4 main contestants: Berdos, Donny, Jennette, and Drew. It is very unlikely that we will ever write about any of the other 6 owners in here, so congrats to those 6. I may be tempting fate here, but a special congrats to our graduate Holden, who was with us for a whole two years down here. We wish you well and hope to never see you again.

Speaking of someone having too many QBs

Now for our special students. Berdos finds himself in a precarious spot. As mentioned before, we are rapidly approaching Byeweekageaddon for him, which feels like a scheduled loss. He needs to find 2 more wins on the schedule. I think he has enough firepower to give us 2-3 more 150 point outputs, but he will also need his opponent to crap the bed. Panic level: 25%.

Our newest member is also our member that is traveling the fastest straight down the standings. Donny has made himself a comfy bed down at the bottom, and things look bleak. He has unironically started Tyquan Thorton 2 weeks this year. Both times, he has scored zero points. He hasn't scored over 115 points in 3 weeks. Josh Allen and Derrick Henry need to put up 70 points combined for him to have a chance week to week. He is the main target to catch, especially after losing to Drew last week, making their tiebreaker be points for. Panic level: 70%

Big win for Drew! That puts him up to 2 wins, and also was a very strong All Play Record win. He may have left things too late, but that win last week was massive, as the gap remains 1, and some PF shenanigans. His team is slightly hotter than Donny's right now. Panic level: 50%

And at the bottom we have arrived. Life may not

From 3rd round rookie pick to WR1 on the week be fair for some. At this point, the hope is to finish last and win the toilet bowl. His schedule is relatively easy down the stretch though if you want some shred of hope. Panic level: 99%.

■ Two tight ends have been the top tight end of the week this year: Tucker Kraft, and Dallas Goedart.

■ Drew's All Play Record the past week was 6-3, which puts his total APR at 16-56. He is just one all play win away from tying his worst ever APR at 17-109.

■ Quiz answer: Andrew in 2021. Started 4-4, got up to 6-4, and lost 4 straight to end up in the bowl at 6-8. 4 teams (!) finished at 7-7.
