So Long, Partner

Jack says bye to Berdos, leaves him in the bowl

Picked up the pieces while wondering how many weeks industry plant JCM will have to score less than 5 points before he's projected under 10 points...

■ We specifically define the Player of the Week as the player who scored the most points that week across all rostered players.

It usually is a QB; Lamar, Josh Allen, and Mahomes all have 7+ POTW awards. Jonathan

DREW ALLEN

Taylor now has the 3rd most non-QB POTW awards with 3.

■ Quiz: Name the two other non QBs that have the same or more awards than him.

■ Here is a list of players who Drew actually started in his 0-14 season. In no particular order: Robbie Anderson, Noah Fant, Isaiah McKenzie, Eno Benjamin, Donovan Peoples-Jones, Kadarius

Toney, Michael Carter, Daniel Bellinger, Chris Moore, Deon Jackson.

■ Berdos has lost 3 in a row. His longest losing streak is 5 games.

■ Every champion we have had has had at least 2 175+ point weeks in that season. Andrew is currently the only owner with more than 2 weeks. Jack, Kyle, Brian, and Michael both have 1.

■ Play that music! It's Path time, and we have some juicy juicy things to talk about here! We have 3 obvious mentions, and then we have 4 other teams sat at 5 wins. Since I already promised Holden he did enough to not be mentioned here the rest of the year, he gets a pass this week, but everyone else is fair game! So let's have a jumbo section of Path Math because in all reality the two toilet bowl members will come from the bottom group of 3. So why not have some fun with it?

De'Von Achane produced the 2nd highest individual RB score this year

Currently in 5th place is the only person to score under 100 this year. Our Dune obsessed owner gave himself some breathing room with a dominant 9-0 All Play Record week. What is better than that though is that it came with Josh Allen looking perfectly average. Nico, Jameson, and Diggs all looked good to great in their matchups, and things are looking up! Panic meter: 20%.

A surprise addition to the Path is the guy whose team names makes me check my mom isn't reading over my shoulder when I edit them. Kyle has had an average to bad 4 weeks here, and it culminated with a league worst score this week. He has too much talent to really worry, but boy would it be funny if he falls down the ladder. Panic meter: 2%.

After a 9-0 All Play Record just 3 weeks ago, two bad scores push Michael down into 7th place. His situation is tenuous, but Drake Maye offers a high ceiling, and his running backs also can go off for 25 points on any given week. Think of him like Donny but with actual high ceiling skill positions. He should start to be slightly worried that he may miss the playoffs, but a toilet bowl appearance isn't likely this year. Panic meter: 10%.

And now to the meat of it. Drew has put together two big weeks with back to back wins. The Berdos loss means his grip on 8th+ place is stronger than ever. In a one game matchup, I'm still taking Berdos, but we play 14 games for a reason. He's not out of it, but he's done a good amount of work to stay above the line. Panic meter: 55%.

Sometimes it's time to pay the piper. Berdos was hoping he could hold off the future for a bit longer, and his all play record is squarely middle of the pack. Would I put it past him to go on a run? No, but time is running out. At this point it feels like he needs 6 wins, which means 3 wins vs the group of Kyle, Brian, Jennette, and Donny. Doable, but unlikely. Panic meter: 88%.

Hey you! I helped Jennette get his 2nd win this week!

Jennette with a big win for him that makes life interesting. He really needed Drew to drop a game as well, as he has to catch 2 people, but he ends the year with Donny, Berdos, Kyle, and the most mouthwatering game of all, vs Drew in week

14. That game could be very very meaningful.
■ Quiz answer: Alvin Kamara with 3, Tyreek Hill with 4.
